FIRST SEMESTER — ASSIGNMENT - I

ANSWER ALL QUESTIONS.

1. Read the passage and answer the questions that follow.

In recent years, digital minimalism, which became popular among young people, was a lifestyle that helped them create a calmer and more focused life. Many chose apps and devices that they truly needed, rather than ones which distracted them constantly. Social media platforms, which often consumed hours of their day, were used more intentionally or even avoided altogether. This approach allowed young people, who wanted to improve their studies, relationships, and personal interests, to feel less stressed and more in control of their time. Digital minimalism became a method through which they could manage technology, which had previously dominated their daily routines.

FIRST SEMESTER — ASSIGNMENT - II

1. Write an essay on "Positive impact of having trusted companionship".

Introduction:

Human beings are inherently social creatures, and throughout life, the connections we forge with others play a vital role in our well-being. Among these relationships, having a trusted companionship is one of the most valuable assets a person can possess. A trusted companion is someone with whom we share mutual respect, honesty, and an emotional bond. Such companionship has a profound positive impact on an individual's emotional, mental, and personal growth.

Mental and Emotional Well-being:

One of the primary benefits of trusted companionship is the immense support it provides for mental and emotional health. Life is filled with challenges, stress, and uncertainties. Having a companion whom we trust completely allows us to share our burdens without fear of judgment. This acts as a natural stress reliever, reducing feelings of anxiety and loneliness. Knowing that there is someone who genuinely cares and listens provides a deep sense of security and emotional comfort.

Personal Growth and Motivation:

A trusted companion serves as a mirror, helping us understand our strengths and weaknesses better. They provide honest feedback and constructive criticism, which are essential for self-improvement. Furthermore, a good companion motivates us to pursue our goals and stands by us during failures. This encouragement builds self-confidence, inspiring individuals to step out of their comfort zones and achieve their full potential.

Healthy Lifestyle and Longevity:

Studies have consistently shown that strong, positive relationships contribute to better physical health. Trusted companions often encourage healthy habits, such as regular exercise, balanced nutrition, and seeking timely medical care. Moreover, the happiness derived from meaningful companionship boosts the immune system and lowers the risk of chronic illnesses, leading to a happier and longer life.

Conclusion:

In conclusion, a trusted companionship is much more than just a social connection; it is a pillar of strength and happiness. It enhances our emotional resilience, nurtures personal growth, and enriches our physical well-being. In a fast-paced and often digitalized world, fostering and maintaining genuine, trusted companionships should be prioritized as a vital component of a fulfilling life.
